

Policing Crowds

1. Public order policing. Police persuasion in terms of determining permits, boundaries, and acceptable behaviour may be more effective than coercion. Original, full article: <https://academic.oup.com/policing/article/14/4/995/5678115>

Health Crises & Violence

2. Health crises & violence. Despite the assumptions that mental health crises and violence are linked, research suggests that mentally ill people commit fewer serial murders than mentally stable people. Original article: <https://pubmed.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/10211145/> [Snippet kindly provided by Beth Price, BSc Criminology, University of Derby]

Witness Interviews

3. Memory recall. Memory recall in witness interviews depends on how much sleep the witness has had prior to and after the event. Research suggests that police interrogation should not occur if the interviewee has been deprived of sleep. Original article: <https://psycnet.apa.org/record/1996-02948-004> [Snippet kindly provided by Beth Price, BSc Criminology, University of Derby]