

Suspect Interviews

1. Suspect Interviews: Convicted offenders identified empathy as a positive influence on their cooperation (Holmberg, U., & Christianson, S. (2002). Murderers' and sexual offenders experiences of police interviews and their inclination to admit or deny crimes. Behavioral Sciences & the Law, 20, 31-45.; Kebbell, M., Hurren, E.J., & Mazerolle, P. (2006). Sex offenders' perceptions of how they were interviewed. Canadian Journal of Police & Security Services, 4, 67-75.)

Domestic Abuse

2. Domestic Abuse: There are 3 types of batterers: low, moderate and high-risk offender. Contradictory to previously held beliefs, most male offenders do not escalate over time from low to high levels of risk. It is unlikely that an offender will move from one type to another. Interventions targeted to address the needs of subsamples of offenders can lead to more effectively protecting those most at risk for future violence. Cavanaugh MM, Gelles RJ. The Utility of Male Domestic Violence Offender Typologies: New Directions for Research, Policy, and Practice. Journal of Interpersonal Violence. 2005;20(2):155-166. doi:10.1177/0886260504268763

A Policing Journal

3. Australasian Policing: A Journal of Professional Practice and Research: This accessible journal contains 6 articles and one book review: (1) Starting from Scratch: Planning Practices and Police Recruits in Western Australia; (2) Migrants in Police Forces: A Sociological Attempt to Get A Broader Picture; (3) Crime and Tourism: The Police Response; (4) County Lines and Wicked Problems: Exploring the need for improved policing approaches to vulnerability and early intervention; (5) Social Media and Police Legitimacy; (6) Book Review: Preventing Violence in Australia: Practice, Policy and Solutions; (7) Who are the Police and what is Policing? Access the entire issue here: AiPol-Volume-7-Number-2-2015.pdf